The Intelligencer Over the Pennsylvania Railroad by Daylight.

Probably the best specimen of an American highway to be found anywhere is the Pennsylvania Railroad, between Pittsburgh and New York. In solidity of construction, superiority of bridge archi-tecture, and smoothness of track it is unrivaled. Throughout its entire length it is laid with a double track of steel rails, weighing sixty-seven pounds to the yard. These rails are fastened on oak ties, im-bedded in broken stone ballast with splice. oints between the ties, and so arranged that the connection on one side comes op-posite to the centre of the rail on the other, thus preventing the uncomfortable and monotinous jar experienced on tracks constructed according to the ordinary plan. The rolling stock is as near perfection as human ingenuity and skill has up to the present time been able to make it. Locomotives and cars ar make it. Locomotives and cars are alike built by the Company in their own shops, and in the details of materials, design, and finish, combine the highest excellence attainable. To all this is ad-ded a rigid policy of management, exacting the utmost care and courtesy from employes of every grade, and the applica-tion of those effective safeguards—the Westinghouse air-brake and the block-signal system—showing that whatever can be accomplished for the safety to travelers has been done on this great line

This high standard of excellence having been reached, the managers of the Pennsylvania Railroad feel warranted in taking another advance step for the spe-cial benefit of through travel, and on the lst of June commenced running a fast daylight train from Pittsburgh to Philadelphia and New York, with close con

The magnificent run of four hundred and forty-four miles between Pittsburgh and forty-four miles between Pittsburgh and New York is made with but three stoppages—the first, of only five minutes, at Altoons, after a stretch of one hundred and seventeen miles; the second, of twenty minutes for dinner, at Harrisburg, after an unbroken dash of one hundred and thirty-two miles, and the third and last, of only five minutes, at Philadelphia, after a time for hundred and first, and one hundred and first with of one hundred and first miles law. or only ave minutes, at Philadelphia, after a run of one hundred and five miles, leaving a single stretch of ninety miles across New Jersey to destination. It is no new thing to say that the scenery on the line of the Pennsylvania road is beautiful, and, in many places, grand. Every American who travels or reads has seen or heard of who travels or reads has seen or heard of it, and the pencils of many artists have labored lovingly to portray, for popular gratification, the attractions of the Allegheny mountains; the Juniata, Susquehanna, and Conemaugh rivers, and the wonderful agricultural vales of Lancaster and Chester counties, through which this road runs. Long sweeps of wooded hills; lofty mountains and dark ravines; picturesoue valleva opening into each other. lotty mountains and dark ravines; pictur-seque valleys opening into each other; sparkling and placid waters; wide rolling, pastoral landscapes, follow in rapid suc-cession. A clang of the bell, sinking away in the rush of the train, signals town after town and village after village. The dusty turnpike, the dreamy canal, and the shaded by-roads are crossed and passed in a flash. On, on, on, one this and the shaded by-roads are crossed and passed in a flash. On, on, on, goes this treless train, over a clear track, carrying the traveler by a panorama, the like of which can be found nowhere else on this continent, and probably not in the world. CHURCH AND STATE.

Mr. Bancroft on the Ecclesiastics Struggle in Germany.
[London Correspondent Chicago Tribune.]
The resignation of Mr. Bancroft cause a feeling among the scholars of Berlin akin to absolute sorrow. During the few years he has passed here as Minister from the United States, he has been able to gather around him a circle of the most brilliant intellects of Germany, whose esteem for sight. intellects of Germany, whose esteem for him was exhibited in a very complimentary way in the larewell dinner given in his honor at their hands. "No other person," says the North German Gazelle, "since the appearance of Franklin at the Court of Frederick the Great, has done as much to establish happy relations between the United States and Germany, as Mr. Bancroit." He stands very high, both in the estimation of Bismarck and the Emperor, which ister caused a portrait of himself to be painted expressly for him on the occasion of his departure. Gertainly no greater compliment, how-him on the occasion of his departure. Certainly no greater compliment, however, could be paid to his talent, than the enthusiastic recognition of the learned coterie of Berlin. One gentleman informed me that never in his life had he met with a person of such varied and exhaustive knowledge as Mr. Bancrott—one who seemed to have all departments of learning so thoroughly at command. It is true that some tongues whisper that he sacrificed independence for the sake of popularity; that his toadyism was too conspicuous; and that—to climax his misdemeanors—he had become denationalized, but I never found any reliable grounds for their never found any reliable grounds for their assertions. Certainly no other American is as able to appreciate the political, so-cial and intellectual life of Germany as he; and, if his views are not considered to be tinctured with the necessary amount of patriotism, republicanism or some other "ism" of dubious signification, his should seribe the seeming anomaly to their own ignorance.

critics should ascribe the seeming anomaly to their own ignorance.

Mr. Bancroft is well known here for his unqualified approval of the course pursued by the government in respect to the Catholic Church; and has also announced as his conviction that corresponding steps will be found necessary, sooner or later, in the United States. A member of the Supreme Ecclesiastical Court (Oberkirchenrath) of Germany, and a warm personal friend of Bancroft's, informed me lately, in private conversation, that the latter is Wells, Fago Sto. 744; Terre Haute. 17 friend of Baucroits, informed me lately, in private conversation, that the latter is quite determined to agitate the matter on his return home, fully convinced as he is that the indifference of American statesmen is the carnest of the translation of the United States into a Papal satraphy. If he carries out his plan, it may be taken for granted that the subject will be sharply discussed, and a projuston of facts and criticisms—the fruits of his historical studies and keen powers of observation—ventilated, that may work a revulsion of public feeling on the subject. For myself, however, I do not think his polemics will be heard beyond the circle of his friends. He is now in his fifty-seventh year, and, besides the impediments of old age, his time is occupied in the revision of his "History of the United States."

A man who stands in the midst of affairs, tested, tried, proved to be a man of unswerving integrity, a man of absolute truth, a man that is true, faithful, honest, honorable, is more valuable than gold, even in a commercial point of view. A man in politics, who, though he may be ambitious and partisan, is shown to be faithful, honorable and trustful—even in politics, who, it has been a man, in the long run, wins. One reason why there are so many mushrooms and puffballs in society is that men forswear morality. In the great bustle of commerce, in the conflict of affairs, in the heated ways of public life, men think that it is not only sate but justifiable and prolitable for them to set aside the fundamental qualities of true manhoad. That is commerce, in the connect of anairs, in the heated ways of public life, men think that it is not only sate but justifiable and profitable for them to set aside the fundamental qualities of true manhood. That is the reason why when they are cut down they never rise again. We honor great men; but it does not take much to make a great man n a community where these a great man in a community where there are newspapers. Great men have a camthreless train, over a clear track, carrying the traveler by a panorama, the like of which can be found nowhere else on this continent, and probably not in the world. After having breakfasted in the Mississippi valley and dined at the capital of Pennarylvania, the passenger finds himself seated at supper in the metropolis of New York, where the Atlantic throbs and swells in its ceaseless activity.

A few years ago the man who should have predicted such a ride would have been pronounced utterly and hopelessly insane. Not even the most sanguine enthusiast on railroads, when their construction was commenced, dreamed of overcoming distance at such a rate; and it so only because of the perfection of Swisshelm on the Scandal
